Brit. Pet. Ltd. "Brings In" No. 4 Well

No. 4 Well Situated Near Nos. 1 & 2 is Declared a Commercial Well by Superintendant Emmens, Dr. J. Hume, Government Geologist, and Others; Gas Pressure at Well Head Now Over 350 lbs.; Flow Tube Now Gives Practically Constant Stream Of Oil; Higher Quality Than No. 2 Well Gave Excitment ran high last Friday when it was learned that the No. 4 well of the British Petroleums Limited has been "brought in, "and that it was to be tubed for a test as to its production. The "tubing-in" was handled during Friday night, and on Saturday morning at 11.30 a.m. the first oil was seen to gush from the two inch pipe which extends over the big pit which extends over the big pit prepared to receive the precious fluid.

At the commencement of the gas and oil came in "heads" and to do so for some hours, bringing with it a small amount of sand.

By Sunday afternoon, however, the well had made great strides at cleaning itself, and the stream of oil was very nearly constant, although not then giving a full stream the size of the pipe. This has been gradually getting better all the time, and the well has been pronounced by both Dr Hume the dominion government geologist and Mr N. W. Emmens, field superintendent for the B.P., as a commercial well.

The quantity and quality tests have not as yet been completer but samples of the oil taken at different periods of the flow are being analysed this end. In addition to this, Mr Emmens has made some laboratory tests in hs office and informs us that the product shows a gravity of eighteen point five Beaume test. This is a much higher showing than made from the oil fdom the No. 2 well, and no doubt proves more satisfactory to all concerned.

The whole of the directors of the company, including Dr McKehnie, the president, spent last week at the well, and left on Saturday evening's train for their homes in Vancouver much pleased with the results of their week's observation.

The flow of the oil when originally piped was somewhere in the neighborhood of four to five barrels per hour, but has steadily increased this amount until it is now considered that the well will eventually prove to be producing probably 200 or more barrels per day.

A large number of oil men from the States and other fields were present at the time of the "bringing in" and all who were asked for an opinion gave it unhesitatingly that "she's sure a producer and a commercial well!"

The dominion geologist, Dr Hume wired to the officials at Ottawa that the well was a producing well, and although he would not make any statement within a short time.

In writing of the actual operations as he saw them, Mr T. Mansell, a staff reporter of the Edmonton Journal, states in Saturday's issue that:—

"The oil which showed itself yesterday in No. 4 British Petroleums well in this field nearly filled the eightinch casing when the crew left the property last evening. It was not thought that the gas pressure would be sufficient to force the oil over the eight-inch casing. Better results, it was decided, would be secured by the installation of small flow pipe. This necessary piping for the small tube arrived Friday evening and the crew was engaged all night in an effort to get this installed so as to divert the fluid to the reservoir near the well. This reservoir has a capacity of 1025 barrels.

At a quarter past eleven Saturday morning oil came in and shot over small tube in the casing. The tubing is now properly connected up to run the oil into the pit. Dr J. F. Hume, dominion government geologist, who is here, informs me that No. 4 is a producing oil well. Dr. Hume has wired the government officials at Ottawa to this effect. He will not say what the oil in the well will analyse and he will not venture an opinion as to the quality of the oil or the capacity of the well. Dr. Hume is taking samples in the interests of the dominion government mines branch.

The crew is now, at 12.30, running the oil into the pit. It is flowing at the rate of from 4 to 5 barrels per hour. The oil will be kept running all afternoon.

Dr. R. E. McKeehnie president of the British Petroleums Company says he has been advised on reliable authority that No. 4 well will produce from 100 to 250 barrels per day if it can only be operated by pumping. He further says that there is no doubt about the well being a producer. The oil first came in yesterday morning after considerable water had been baled and during the day there was a steady rise in the casing. The directors of the company are leaving this evening on their return trip to Vancouver.

Feld Superintendent, N. W. Emmens, declines to make any estimate of the well's capacity. He says that next week, when he expects to have the well flowing properly he will be in a better position to gauge its capacity. The quality of the oil in the well is much better than that discovered in No. 2 well says Mr Emmens. He states that tests made on Friday show the oil to have more than a 4 point improvement over No. 2 in gravity. Samples of the oil will be sent to the University of Alberta and to other points for analysis.

There has been no final decision in regard to a public demonstration which will probably be called off for the present. Officials say that anyone desiring to see the well will be admitted and will be permitted to take samples when the pit is filled.

ANOTHER OIL COMPANY

The Mills Oil Company is the latest entrant to the Wainwright field. This company has purchased the standard drilling rig formerly operated by the Record Oil company of Calgary and will erect it three miles north of Wainwright on section 24, township 45 range 7. It is understood that the company expects to commence work immediately.

A new house is being erected in the park near the home of Mr D. Davison iso which we understand will be occupied by Mr Rod McLeod. Dick Mc Kay has the contract for this.

MAPLE LEAF WELL IS NOW BEING "DRILLED IN"

We are informed by Mr R. E. Williams, field manager of the Maple Leaf company, that Driller Davy Credille made a start on Monday with the "drilling-in" of their No. 1 well preparatory to bringing in the oil which was found when drilling was stopped.

A large control head valve is being rushed to the site of the work with all dispatch, and by the time it arrives it is thought things will be ready for its placement on the casing head.

It will probably be some time on Thursday before this well comes in and meanwhile the work on preparing the derrick at the No. 2 well which is immediately north of the first twell and only a few hundred yards from it, is being proceeded with It is the intention of Mr Williams to have some five or six holes drilled immediately following each other, and as the field is now considered to be thoroughly proven, there can hardly be any doubt in the minds of our readers as to the results from this work.

OIL DERRICKS DOT WAINWRIGHT FIELDS

Some scenes when British Petroleums well No. 4 was brought in on Saturday near Wainwright are shown above. No. 1, at the upper left shows the oil pool forming just under the end of the flow pipe, while a number of directors and others are standing in the big pit which has a capacity of 1,025 barrels. Those standing, from left to right, are: J. Ralston, Vancouver, and T. Sugars, Edmonton, directors; "Happy" Aiken and A. Crawford, drillers; C. Maharg, Vancouver, director; Mr. Hoffman of Oil Well Supply company, California; Dr. R. E. McKechnie, Vancouver, B. P. president; L. S. Kohlman, Vancouver, director; A. Van Buren, Calgary.

No. 3 picture shows the Maple Leaf Oil company's derrick and camp. It is expected that the final tests on this well will start on Tuesday.

MISS AGNES C. LAUT VISITS OIL FIELD

Miss Agnes C. Laut, well-known Canadian writer, a visitor in town and in addition to a Buffalo park trip, viewing activities in the various Wainwright oil fields. She seems impressed with the progress here since her last visit and no doubt will express her views publicly later.

BRITISH LADS GIVEN CHANCE OF THEIR LIFETIME

"Strong and healthy British youths between the ages of seventeen and twenty-five years with a small capital from fifty to one hundred pounds and desirous of becoming Canadian farmers may now have an opportunity of gratifying their ambition."

So reads the first paragraph of an enticing article in the "The Colonizer (London, England) outlining the Alberta government scheme, in co-operation with the government of Canada for training British boys in the science of agriculture and affording them a chance to settle on Alberta farms.

The story tells all about the newly-adopted plan, which contemplates the bringing to Canada of one hundred or more British youths, offering them a training course in the provincial school of agriculture at Vermilion, free of cost except for board and lodging during the winter, and guarantaing to place them on farms in the spring.

Undoubtedly it should prove the source of much interest in the old country.

PRES. OF CALGARY COMPANY ATTENDS B. P. DEMONSTRATION

Mr A. P. VanBuren, president of the newly-formed British-Wainwright Oil & Development Co, was a very enthusiastic spectator at the B.P. No. 4 well during the excitement of making a "producer from a "prospect" on Saturday.

When questioned regarding the movements of his company, Mr VanBuren stated that a drilling site was being selected and the derrick would be going up shortly. The lumber for the derrick arrived in Wainwright a few days ago, and the drilling rig has been here for some time. The contract for hauling both lumber and rig to the location has been let to Mr L. F. Bean and this will commence immediately

The company holds some choice acreage in close proximity to the B. P. sites of No. 1, 2, and4, and also has a far the center of 45-6, which is considered excellent holdings. The balance of their leases form a large circle through 46-6, 46-5, 45-5, 44-5, 44-6 and 44-7. The company has approximately 4,000 acres in the Wainwright field while it also has drilling sites near every drilling well in the province.

Driller Halstead, of many oilfields, will be in charge of the British-Wainwright well, and he is considered one of the best drillers in the west today

Mr VanBuren is also secretary of the Baxter Lake Oil Co. Ltd, which is a large holder of leases in 45-6; the B P. No. 3 well being situated on Baxter Lake holdings.

HON. R. G. REID STATES EAST IS FACING DIFFICULTY

"The unemployment problem in Alberta is not nearly so acut as in other provinces," declared the Hon R. G Reid, provincial treasurer on his return from the Dominion unemployment conference at Ottawa.

"The situation appears to be much more serious in the East, especially in Ontario and compared with the problem in Alberta I almost felt that the Alberta representatives had very little right to be present at the conference.

"Reports from the Eastern industrial centres showed that the conditions there are far worse than here.

"It was the feeling of the meeting at Ottawa that the situation should not be a matter for provincial and municipal authorities to overcom: alone, but that the Dominion government should also assume some responsibility, and a resolution to that effect was put through. The Hon James Murdock Federal Minister of Labor, gave an assurance that this phase of the question would be considered by the Government in due course.

"Emphasis was placed in all the discussions at the conference upon the necessity of providing a larger amount of seasonal employment during the winter months, and it was pointed out that in the building trades particularly there is much work that can be done in the winter to good advantage, thus overcoming one of the main difficultics of what is otherwise a slack time."

WAINWRIGHT DOME OIL CO. RECEIVE DOMINION CHARTER

The above is the Official title of the latest Company that has been incorporated under Dominion Charter.

Holdings have been secured to the extent of some Two Thousand acres in the very heart of the oil-field, determined upon as the result of a report by Dr. C. C. Coulter, who is conceded to be one of the ablest geologists who has given this field a thorough investigation.

The Wainwright Dome Oil Company is composed of prominent Edmonton and Wainwright business men, and guided by the result of actual drillings to date, and a personal knowledge of where the most valuable acreage for the production of oil exists, this stock should make an attractive issue.

The dominion charter has already been granted, we learn that the organizatio meeting of the Company is to take place very shortly, and that it is the intention not to sell stock at less than Par value

The company is in touch with several good drilling plants, and is at this moment considering which of them should be secured, having thought to the requirements of the field from a drilling standpoint.

The directorate being composed of practical business men of repute who are well and favorably known through out this district should ensure for the company that confidence in its operations which is so essential on the part of the investing public at the time of an oil excitement which is now bound to take place here in the very near future.

ALBERTA PACIFIC GLTS FIRST LOAD NEW SEASON WHEAT

To Mr Bob Moffat goes the honor of being the first to deliver a load of 1924 wheat to the Wainwright market.

The grain was brought in on Wednesday last by W. E. Moffat and delivered to the Bob. Dunsmore of the Alberta Pacific elevator having been grown by Mr R. Moffat on the S. E. 24-45-6w4.

It proved to be a beautiful sample of Ruby wheat weighing 65 pounds to the bushel and yielding about 14 bushels per acre. Mr Moffat received a grading of No. 1 Northern for the load and a price of $1.17 per bushel and as the net weight delivered was exactly 100 bushels he received a cheque for one hundred and seventeen dollars as his first returns from this year's crop.

It is such incidents as this which makes farming still very attractive in this district.

LABORATORY FOR STUDYING RUST FOR MANITOBA

An intensive research laboratory, the largest in the west, for the purpose of studying rust, to discover, if possible, means of eradicating the menace, will be established in Manitoba. The project will, it is understood, include the erection of several large greenhouses for experimental purposes and a large research building

It is not likely that the site will be at the Manitoba Agricultural college About 25 acres would be devoted to the work according to proposed plans

A report will be furnished by the committee in charge to the federal government at Ottawa and it is probable that definite announcement of the site will be made shortly, Rust research work has been carried on at the Manitoba Agricultural college for about five years, but on a somewhat limited scale. Saskatchewan also has a similar laboratory.

The proposed new laboratory, however would be on a much larger scale than at present established in the west

"Captain Blood"

BUCCANEER,

"CAPTIAN BLOOD, BUCCANEER," a Vitagraph picture with J. Warren Kerrigan in the title role, is an adaptation of this thrilling novel.

After a brief pause the door gaped wide. Mr Blood strode in followed by his distraught companion, who, falling upon Arabella's slender bosom surrendered herself to a passion of tears.

"Whom have you here with you? What servants?" he demanded sharply. The only male was James, an old negro groom.

"The very man," said Blood. "Bid him get out the horses. Then away with you to Speightstown, or even farther north, where you will be safe. Here you are in danger—in dreadful danger. The deviltry's only beginning In God's name, madam take my word for it, and do as I bid you."

"He... he saved me," sobbed Miss Traill

A courtly gentleman met Colonel Bishop

"Let that wait," snapped Mr Blood almost angrily. "Will you please call James, and do as I say—and at once!"

"You are very peremptory ..."

"Yes, yes," the girl cried, shuddering. "Do as he says—Oh, for pity's sake, Arabella."

The horses came at last—four of them, for in addition to James who was to act as he guide, Miss Bishop had her woman who was not to be left behind.

Mr Blood lifted the slight weight of Mary Traill to her horse, then turned to say good-bye to Miss Bishop, who was already mounted. He said it, and seemed to have something to add. But whatever it was it remainded unspoken. He went off briskly in the direction of the stocade, where his fellowslaves awaited him in deep anxietyand some hope.

CHAPTER IX
THE REBELS-CONVICT ...

There were, when the purple gloom of the tropical night descended upon the Caribbean, not more than ten men on guard aboard the Cinco Llagas, so confident were the Spaniards of the complete subjection of the islanders As a matter of fact, whilst the main body of the Spaniards feasted and rioted ashore, the Spanish gunner and his crew were feasting on the gun-deck upon the wine and the fresh meats fetched out to them from ashore. Above, two sentinels only kept vigil at stem and stern. Nor were they as vigilant as they must have observed the two wherries that under cover of the darkness came gliding from the wharf, with the well-greased rowlocks to bring up in silence under the great ship's quarter.

From the gallery aft still hung the ladder by which Don Diego had descended to the boat that had taken him ashore. The sentry on guard in him ashore. The sentry on guard in the stern, coming presently round this gallery, was suddenly confronted by the black shadow of a man standing before him at the head of the ladder. It was Peter Blood.

The wooden taffra, was a low one and the Spaniard was taken completely by surprise. Save for the splash he made as he struck the water, narrowly missing one of the crowded boats that waited under the counter not a sound announced his misadventure Armed as he was with corslet, cuissarts, and headpiece, he sank to trouble them no more. Within five minutes they had swarmed board of the entire twenty of them overflowing from thenarrow gallery and crouching on the quarter-deck itself.

Crouching low, they gilded, noiseless as shadows, to the quarter-deck rail, and thence slipped without sound down into the waist. In the vessel's waist they hung awhile, until Mr. Blood had satisfied himself that no other sentinel showed above decks but that inconvenient fellow in the brow. Their first attention must be to him. Mr Blood, himself, crept forward with two companions, leaving the others in the charge of that Nathaniel Hagthrope whose sometime commission in the King's Navy gave him the best title to this office.

Mr Blood's absence was brief. When he rejoined his comrades there was no watch above in the Spaniards' decks Meanwhile the revellers below continued to make merry at their ease in the conviction of complete security. Suddenlyout of an uncouth pack of savages that beset them, stepped a slim tall fellow, with light-blue eyes in a tawny face, eyes in which glinted the light of a wicked humour. He addressed them in the purest Castilian.

"You will save yourselves pain and trouble by regarding yourselves my prisoners and suffering yourselves to be quietly bestowed out of harm's way."

"Name of God" swore the gunner, which did no justice at all to an amazement beyond expression.

"If you please," said Mr Blood, and thereupon those gentlemen of Spain were induced without further trouble beyond a musket prod or two to drop through a scuttle to the deck below.

It was soon after sunrise that the rebel-convict who paced the quarter deck in Spanish corselet and headpiece a Spanish musket on his shoulder announced the approach of a boat It was Don Diego de Espinosa y Valdez coming aboard with four great treasure-chests containing twenty five thousand pieces of eight the ransom delivered to him at dawn by Governor Steed. He was accompanied by his son, Don Esteban, and by six men who took the oars.

Don Diego mounted the ladder and stepped upon the deck, alone and entirely unsuspicious. Before he could even look round, and survey this guard drawn up to receive him, a tap over the head efficiently handled by Hagthrope put him to sleep without the least fuss. He was carried away to his cabin whilst the treasure-chests, handled by the men he had left in the boat, were being hauled to the deck. That being satisfactorily accomplished, Don Esteban and the fellows who had manned the boat came up the ladder, one by one, to be handled with the same quiet efficiency.

With Colonel Bishop at their head and gout-ridden Governor Steed sitting on the ruins of a vall beside him, survivors on shore glumly watched the departure of the eight boats containing the weary Spanish ruffians who had glutted themselves with rapine, murder and violences unspeakable.

The boats pulled away from the shore, with their loads of laughing jeering Spaniards, who were still flinging taunts across the water at their surviving victims. They had come midway between the wharf and the ship, when suddenly the air was shaken by the boom of a gun. A round shot struck the water within a fathom of the foremost boat, sending a shower of spray over its occupants A second shot came to crumple one of the boats into splinters, flinging its crew, dead and living, into the water

The resolute Ogle was making excellent practice, and fully justifying his claims to know something of gunnery. In their consternation the Spaniards had simplified his task by huddling their boats together.

If the Spaniards understood nothing of all this, the forlorn islanders ashore understood still less, until to help their wits they saw the flag of Spain come down from the mainmast of the Cinco Llagas, and the flag of England soar to its empty place. Ogle however, continued to give proof that his knowledge of gunnery was not of yesterday After the fleeing Spaniard's went his shots. The last of their boats flew into splinters as it touched the wharf, and its remains were buried under a shower of loosened masonary.

The mystery of the succour that had come at the evelenth hour to wreak vengeance upon the Spandiards and to preserve for the island the extortionate ransom of a hundred thousand pieces of eight, remained yet to be probed. That the Cinco Llagas was now in friendly hands could no longer be doubted after the proofs it had given. It remained to ascertain the precise identity of these mysterious favours and do them fitting honor Upon this errand went Colonel Bishop as the Govenor's deputy, attended by two officers.

As he stepped from the ladder into the vessel's waist, the Colonel beheld there, beside the main hatch, the four treasure-chests, the contents of one of which had been contributed almost entirely by himself. Ranged on either side, athwart the deck, stood a score of men in two well-ordered files, with breasts and backs of steel, polished Spanish morions on their heads, overshadowing their faces and muskets ordered at their sides.

A courtly gentleman advanced to greet him—a lean, graceful gentleman dressed in the Spanish fashion, all in black with silver lace, a gold-hilted sword dangling beside him from a gold embroidered baldrick, a broad castor with a sweeping plume set above carefully curled ringlets of deepest black.

"Be welcome aboard the Cinco Llagas, Colonel, darling," a voice vaguely familiar addressed the planter.

"Peter Blood! Was it you then.

"Myself it was myseelf and thees my good friends and yours."

"Gad's my life!" he crowed on a note of flooish jubilation. "And it was with these fellows that you took the Spaniard and turned the tables on those hot dogs! As Gad's my life you deserve well for this."

"I am entirely of your opinion." said Mr Blood. "The question is how well we deserve and how grateful shall we find you?"

"Whyy—his excellency shall write home an account of your exploit, and maybe some portion o your sentences shall be remitted."

"The generosity of King James as well known," sneered Nathaniel Hafthorpe, who was standing by, and amongst the ranged rebels convict some one ventured to laugh.

And one intervened—the brawny one-eyed Wolverstone, less mercifully diposed than his move gentlemanly fellow-convict.

"String him up from the yardarm." he cried; Mr. Blood turned

"If you please, Wolverstone," said he, "I conduct affairs in my own way. That is the pect. You'll please to remember it." His eyes looked along the ranks, making it plain that he addressed them all. "I desire that Colonel Bishop should have his life. One reason is that I require him as a hostage. If ye insist on hanging him ye'll have to hang me with him, or in the alternative I'll go ashore."

He paused. There was no answer But they stood hang-dog and half-mutinous before him, save Hagthrope who shrugged and smiled wearily Mr Blood resumed.

"Ye'll please to understand that aboard a ship there is one captain So. He swung again to the startled Colonel. "Though I promise you your life I must—as you've heard—keep you aboard of a hostage for the good behaviour of Govenor Steed and what's left of the fort until we put to sea."

"But . . ."

"There is no more to be said, gentlemen. My name is Blood— Captain Blood if you please, of this ship the Cinco Llagas, taken as a prize of war from Don Diego de Espinosa y Valdez, who is my prisoner aboard."

The officers went, though not without some hustling, regardless of the bellowings of Colonel Bishop, whose monstrous rage was fanned by terror at finding himself at the mercy of these men of whose cause to hate him he was very fully conscious. As they were running close to the headland east of the bay, Peter Blood returned to the Colonel, who, under guard and panicstricken, had dejectedly resumed his seat on the coamings of the main hatch.

"Can ye swim, Colonel? It's a mercy for you I'm not by nature as bloodthirsty as some of my friends here. And it's the devil's own labor I've had to previal upon them not to be vindictive.

It was the thought of Arebella Bishop that had led him to oppose the natural vindictiveness of his fellow-slaves until he had been in danger of precipitating a mutiny It was entirely to the fact that the Colonel was her uncle, although he did not even begin to suspect such a cause that he owed such mercy as was now being shown him. Colonel Bishop mastered himself and rose. Peter Blood gave an order. A plank was run out over the gunwale and lashed down.

"Just take a little walk, Colonel darling," said a smooth, mocking voice behing him.

Still clinging, Colonel Bishop looked around in hesitation. He cursed them aloud venomously and incoherently, then loosed his hold and stepped out upon the plank. Three steps he took before he lost his balance and went tumbling into the green depths below.

When he came to the surface again gasping for air, the Cinco Llagas was already some furlongs to leeward.

But the roaring cheer of mocking valediction from the rebels-convict reached him across the water, to drive the iron of impotent rage deeper into his soul.

Chapter X
DON DIEGO

Don Diego de Espinosa y Valdez awoke, and with languid eyes in aching head, he looked round the cabin which was flooded with sunlight from the square windows astern. Between the pain in his head and the confusion in his mind, he found coherent though impossible.

He was beginning to torture his opened, and to Don Diego's increasing mystificating he beheld his best suit of clothes step into the cabin. The suit paused to close the door, then advanced toward the couch on which Don Diego was extended, and inside, the suit came a tall slender

Less Pot-washing

SMP Enameled Ware has the smooth surface and polish of fine crockery—without the breakage. And it is so very easy to clean—just like china, and therefore makes light work of pot washing.

Try this test. Take an SMP Enameled Ware sauce pan and an all-metal sauce pan of equal size. Into each pour a quart of cold water. Put on the fire at the same time. The SMP sauce pan will be boiling merrily when the water in the other is just beginning to simmer.

OUR YESTERDAYS

Time knows but one movement — eternally forward. No power of God or man can turn time backwards or stop it and give us another chance to see our yesterdays.

Our yesterdays are as gone as as summers's flowers. Unlike the flowers, they have no seed, no roots, no means of reproduction that they or their kind may return to us. Our yesterdays are gone—gone forever and it is useless to stand at their grave and lament, and wish them back. They are gone with their opportunities, their hopes, their despair, and the good or evil of our yesterdays may live on and on because the power of these things died not with them.

If we squandered our yesterdays, we will some day face the record with regret. If the life to come is progressive as is the life here, we will lament that our yesterdays were put to no noble purpose. Whether or not there will be a hell when we pass to where we shall know as we are known, we will experience that same despair over our wasted yesterdays that we often feel now when we long for schooldays that are forever gone.

Each succeeding year should find us advaneing. If not we are practically wasting the time that has been allotted to us. If nothing else we should be able to say like Longfellow: 'Some thing accomplished, something done to earn a nights repose."

LETS LOOK SUCCESSFUL

To be successful, you must look successful. If you will carry yourself with a self confident air, it inspires others with the belief in your ability and your success. You get to believe in it yourself. You begin to walk as if you were master of yourself. You will believe in your ability to do things and you are confident of results.

It does not take a keen observer to pick out a successful dealer. If he is prosperous, every step, every movement, every look, indicates it. There is a great deal in assuming the part of the character you desire to play in this drama of life.

There is nothing negative about the positive man. He is a success, and like Hercules, he has conquered the moment he looks upon you. This is personal magnetism; cultivate it then you will not need bolstering up. Learn to stand alone. Your very silence should carry power. Learn the value of reserve force.

Self-confidence is the power to man shall all the faculties and unite their strength in one mighty cable. It matters not what your talents may be what your abilities or ambitions may be, if you are lacking in self-confidence you can never use them to the best advantage. Self-trust is as necessary as ability.

Concentrate your faculties and your good qualities. Carry yourself with a self-confident air, and you will win still more confidence. Failure or success has its true worth in these two little words, "I can't or I will." Look successful.

THE WESTERN OUTLOOK

For a month Mr. Hector McKinnin staff correspondent of the Toronto Globe, travelled continuously through out the west with a view to sizing up crop and general conditions here. In similar mission for his newspaper says' The Journal, and has thus a very thorough knowledge of the country on which to found his opinions. On September 4, at Winnipeg, on his way back east, he summarized his out standing impressions.

The first was that only a climatic catastrophe, which to be feared had to occur within four or five days of the time he wrote—and eleven days have passed since then—could serve to ruir Canada's chances of a wheat crop close upon 300,000,000 bushels. It would be of high commercial grade and unusually high milling qualities. Oats and barley would not be as abundant as wheat, but the west would be amply provided with fodder The crop would be worth mire in net cash return to the individual farmer than was the larger crop of 1923. There would be satisfactory reduction in farm debt and the farmers would practice thrift.

This last virtue is, to Mr McKinnon's mind, the most marked development on the prairies in recent years while the next in importance to it is the increased thoroughness in cultivation. The value of live stock as part of the agricultural scheme is becoming more appreciated. Dairying is expanding into a prime industry. Mr McKinnon has no doubt that the horse is coming to its own again and he finds especial significance in this. It means the passing of the "big farm idea and other "big ideas," and, "with the smaller unit will come a new and better west."

The final conclusion is that "the west has never been so imbued as today with downright, unadorned confidence in its own future." This must strike most of us as going too far. Mr McKinnon's acquaintance with the country does not go back to the prewar years and he is probably thinking only of the immediate past in making his comparison. But the fact that he finds so strong a contrast between the prevailing spirit and that of the last four or five years means a great deal.

If his statement that never have westerners had so much confidence in their future is somewhat of an exaggeration, the time cannot be far off when it will strictly true. Our industry was never on a better basis than it is now and the results that will accrue from this must speedily put an end to any doubts which may still persist as to what the future has in store for us. The improvement in our economic situation which he finds is substantiated by other competent investigators.

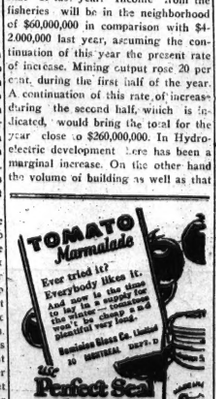

There is 'nothing to beat the breast in connection with the outlook, and those who do so are only showing that they are blind to the facts. An era of greatly enlarged opportunity lies immediately ahead in which individual courage and enterprise will have full reward.

BUYING POWER IS $100,000,000 GREATER FOR THIS YEAR

The Financial Post estimates that the total net revenue from all branches of production in Canada during 1924 will exceed that of 1923 by more than $100,000,000—assuming the continuation of the present rate of expansion in certain branches of production, and the maintenance of the present level of prices of primary products

The above estimate which is based on output figures in all departments during the current year to date, in comparison with that of previous years takes account of the decline in certain branches of production and the increase in others, as well as the change in price levels.

According to figures complied by the Bureau of Statistics, farm product netted $1,253,000,000 last year. The current decline in the yield of the grain crops is more than balanced by the general rise in price levels and the increase in livestock sales, so that, in kil net increase. The revenue from forestry will be somewhat higher than that of last year. Income from the fisheries will be in the neighborhood of $60,000,000 in comparison with $42,000,000 last year, assuming the continuation of this year the present rate of increase. Mining output rose 20 per cent. during the first half of the year. A continuation of this rate of increase during the second half, which is indicated, would bring the total for the year close to $260,000,000. In Hydro-electric development there has been a marginal increase. On the other hand the volume of building as well as that of manufacturing has declined materially during the year. The aggregate of all these various departments totals to $3,400,000,000 as against $3,292,768,- during 1923.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

A little girl from town was staying with some country cousins who live on ao farm. At breakfast one morning she saw on the table a dish of honey, and regarded this as an opportunity to show her cousins that she knew something of country life after all.

Looking at the dish of honey, she said, carelessly: "Ah I see you keep a bee."

An assistant minister in a certain church, who rejoiced in the name Day had a call ta a church of his own. At the evening service he preached his farewell sermon to those among whom he had been laboring, and at the conclusion announced that they would close by singing hymn 371. The congregation tittered when they began with " The day Thou gavest, Lord, is ended."

"There isn't any trouble now. They have separated."

"Did you ever eatch your husband flirting?"

"Only once."

"What did you do to him?"

"Married him."

This is the kind of dialogue we must expect to hear shortly:—

Little Boy. "I was born within the sound of Bow Bells, so I am a real Londoner."

Little Girl: "Well, don't swank —so am I, if it comes to that."

"Oh, you story, you come all the way from Canada."

"What about it? Just as I was being born, the neighbours were listening to Bow Bells on a loud speaker."

A thief was caught breaking into a song. He had already got through two bars, when a policeman came up and hit with his stave. Several notes were found upon him.

Solomon was in the bar when Ikey walked in.

Seeing Solomon calling for a drink, Ikey said, "Vat about the drink you promised me?"

"Vell," said Solomon, " as I promised you von, I suppose I must buy it for you. Vat vill you take?"

"I'll have a large visky and a small soda," said Ikey.

"Yoi! Yoi!" cried Solomen "Only von drink at a time! Give him a small soda, mister!"

Hubby: "Did you take me for a fool?"

Wifie: "No. I took you for a husband; but a womah can't help what she gets."

The flower show had been a great success, and a few evenings later Mr. Blank, J.P., who had Presently he stopped reading, his justifiable pride turning to anger. Snatching up his stick, he rushed from the room. Amazed, his wife picked up the newspaper to ascertain the reason of her sponso's fury.

She read: "As Mr. Blank mounted the platform all eyes were fixed on the large red 'nose' he displayed. Only years of patient cultivation could have produced an object of such bril-

BRITISH SCIENTISTS AT JASPER PARK

THE special Canadian National trains, carrying the members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science were halted at Jasper, Alta., long enough for the visiting scientists to see some of the beauties of Canada's largest national park. The visitors were entertained at Jasper Park Lodge and were also taken for drives to Maligne Canyon and Mt. Edith Cavell. Photograph shows three members of the party standing before the totem pole at Jasper Station. Left to right, they are: Senator Faure (of France); Sir Charles Parsons, inventor of the turbine engine, and Sir Robert Falconer, Chancellor of Toronto University.

Here and There

Moose hunting opened in the Province of Quebec on September 10th. Indications are that an unusually large number of hunters will invade the woods this fall and the rush for licenses is well under way.

Edward A. Patterson, mining engineer of London, England, visiting Nova Scotia, states that the mineral resources of that province are practically lying dormant and that with proper development along scientific lines, mining could be advanced to first place in the province's industries.

Calgary, Alta., is planning an artificial ice rink, because of the prevalence of chinooks in the winter, but the project will not be carried out in time for the coming season. Calgary had to abandon its scheme for an annual winter carnival because it could not count on weather that was cold enough or on snow.

The members of the band of the famous Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry were among the passengers sailing for England aboard the Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of France" on September 10th. Under the direction of Lieut. T. W. James, they are to play at the British Empire Exhibition at Wembley.

The Duke de Alba, 17th of that name and 10th Duke of Berwick in the British nobility, together with the Duchess of Alba and several other distinguished Spaniards, is touring Canada over Canadian Pacific lines. Their itinerary includes Niagara Falls, Toronto, Banff, Lake Louise, Vancouver and Victoria.

Transformation for the better wrought among the Eskimos in the last 25 years is almost unbelievable, so Bishop I. O. Stringer, of the Anglican diocese of the Yukon, reported on a recent visit to Edmonton, Alta. The Bishop attributes this improvement to the influence of the missionaries and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The "Calgary process," the newest method of oil refining, was examined with interest by the members of the British Association for the Advancement of Science during their recent visit to Calgary, Alta. This process has become world-famous ever since the experiments conducted at the local Imperial oil refinery proved so successful.

THE SAVE THE CHILDREN FUND

The Western Grain Campaign of The Save the Children Fund, in aid of the starving women and children refugees driven out of Turkey into Greece, has been set throughout the three Prairie Povinces with the co-operation of all the Grain Growers, Wheat Pool and Elevator Companies and Farmers' Organizations. 20,000 posters have been distributed and elevator managers will receive donations of grain and will then issue a graded storage ticket which the doner will endorse to The Save the Children Fund. A recent cable from Dr. Kendy, the Canadian Representative of the Fund in Greece, makes a stirring appeal for help as tens of thousands of these suffering war victims are still being evicted from Turkey and are pouring into Greece helpless, poverty-stricken and hungry.

Many contributions of cash are being received by the Honorary Treasurer of the Fund, C. W. Rowley, 305 Scott Block, Winnipeg. A number of Womens' Institutes, Homemakers' Clubs and Womens' Section of Grain Growers' Associations are voting help in this way, while numerous churches and Sunday schools are doing the same. It is a case of "he who gives quickly, gives twice," and those who wish to help in this worthy cause may be assured that their gifts will be quickly and economically administered and that they will thus help to save many human lives.

Every meeting, whether of the public, or of a society, club, or association, should be advertised in the local paper.

By advertising the meeting, those interested have an opportunity of knowing about the affair beforehand, and can plan accordingly.

The chances of getting a good attendance at these functions are increased by newspaper advertising; because the paper carries the message to its readers, while other forms of advertising, such as posters, handbills, etc, require the reader to come to them, and they cost more.

Teas, Sales, Dances, Concerts, etc., can all be given publicity through the columns of the local paper.

Implements, Feed, Seed Grain, Stock, Houses for sale or rent, all these can be advertised cheaply and effectively through "The Star".

The advertisement will be read by everyone in a wide district, and the result from it will thereby be increased.

Advertising in the local news column is 10c per line per issue.

Dog Travels Three Thousand Miles to Home and Gets Medal

Bob, a Scotch collie, recently traveled approximately 3,000 miles to return to his home in Oregon after having been lost in the middle west. Its owners had taken it with them on an automobile trip, and while they were crossing Iowa, Bob strayed away. After an unsuccessful search, they went on to Indiana and then drove back to the Pacific coast, never expecting to see their pet again. Six months after their return, Bob came trotting home, weak from fatigue, footsore and with claws worn short. It developed that the animal had trailed the automobile from Iowa to Indiana and then had started back on the long trip to Oregon. The state humane society, after investigation, presented the dog with a medal and school children petitioned the village council to give it the freedom of the streets for the rest of its life.

Weather Superstitions Are Disproved by Science

Several common superstitions concerning the weather have been disproved by the weather bureau at Washington. In both Europe and America there is an old belief that a severe storm —the so-called "equinoctial gale" —is due about the date of either equinox, that is, March 21 or Sept. 22.

According to scientists the e is no maximum of storm frequency either in this country or abroad close to the date of either equinox. Of course, in the long run, storms do occur about these dates, just as they occur at all other times in the year, but there is no reason why they should be especially frequent at the equinoxes.

Commenting on the moon's influence on the weather, the bureau says: "Modern science is unable to find any evidence that the moon affects the weather to an appreciable extent, and is unable to conceive of any reason why it should." The belief in "dry" and "wet" moons, indicated by the position of the lunar crescent in the evening sky, and a host of other notions are denounced as merely idle superstitions.

Eliminating Jacks in Receiving Sets

When tuning in stations most people use the amplifiers from the start, turning the filaments down low while using the phones and turning them up while using the loud speaker. Therefore, the use of a separate jack for the detector and first-stage amplifier is often unnecessary and a useless expense. Besides this, the use of two or more jacks adds to the complication of the construction and requires much more wiring than if only one jack were used.

Handy Orchard Ladder

Pruning and fruit picking can be accomplished in a shorter time and with less damage to the trees with the specially devised ladder shown in the illustration, than is possible with the use of an old-style ladder. Upon the upper end of a common ladder a forked extension, made from a length of 2 by 2-in. oak and two lengths of tire iron, is hinged to swing up and down. It is controlled from below by a lever and ratchet fastened to the side of the ladder, about 4 ft. from the lower end, a discarded cultivator lever being used for the purpose. The lever is connected to the extension by means of a ½-in. steel rod, so that the movement of the lever causes a corresponding movement of the extension. The object of the extension is to hold the ladder at convenient distances from the trunk so that any part of the branches can be reached. The extension, being inserted in a crotch, will form a safe support and prevent such damage to the tree and fruit as might result from forcing an ordinary ladder between the branches.

CAPTIAN BLOOD

gentleman of about Don Diego's own height and shape. Seeing the wide, startled eyes of the Spaniard upon him the gentleman lengthened his stride.

"Awake, eh?" said he in Spanish.

"Who the devil are you he asked "And what the devil are you doing in my clothes and aboard my ship?"

"My name is Blood—Captain Peter Blood. This ship, like this handsome suit of clothes, is mine by right of conquest. Just as you, Don Diego are my prisoner,"

"And my son What of my son?" he cried out. "He was in the boat that brought me aboard."

"Your son is safe; he and the boat's crew together with your gunner and his men are snugly in irons under hatches"

Don Dego sank back on the couch his glittering dark eyes fixed upon the tawny face above him. He accepted the situation with the fortitude of a fatalist The light blue eyes played over him like points of steel

"You are not afraid to die, Don Diego?"

"The question is offensive, sir"

"Would you be willing sir, to earn life and liberty—for yourself, your son, and the other Spanards who are on board?"

"To earn it, do you say? Why if the service you would propose is one that cannot hurt my honor....."

"Could I be guilty of that?" protested the Captain "I realize that even a pirate has his honor The only man among us schooled in the art of navigation is fevered, delirious, in fact, as a result of certain ill-treatment he received ashore before we carried him away with us I can handle a ship in action and there are one or two men aboard who can assist me; but of the higher mysteries of seamanship and of the art of finding a way over the trackless wastes of ocean, we know nothing. We desire to make for the Dutch settlement of Curacao a straightly as possible. Will you pledge me your honor if I realease you upon parole, that you will navigate us thith err? If so, we will release you and your surviving men upon arrival there

Don Diego strode away in thought to the stern windows. "I accept," he said.

Chapteh XI

FILIAL PIETY

By virtue of the pledge he had given, Don Diego de Espinosa enjoyed the freedom of the ship that had been his, and the navigation which he had undertaken was left entirely in his hands. He took his meals in the great cabin with Blood and the three office elected to support him; Hagthorpe Wolverstone, and Dyke,

That Don Diego was not playing fair it was impossible to inspect. Moreover, there was no conceivable reason why he should not. "If this wind holds," he had told them at supper after he had announced to them their position "we should reach Curacao inside three days."

For three days the wind held, and yet when the third night descended on them they had still made no landfall. Captain Blood uneasily mentioned it to Don Diego.

"It will be for to-morrow morning" he was answered with calm conviction.

Captain Blood passed on, content and went to visit Jerry Pitt, his patient to whose condition Don Diego owed his chance of life. It was this same Jerry Pitt who cast the first thought of suspicion. A trip on deck for a breath of fresh air and his navigator's interest in the night heavens moved him to point out the North Star and to lay the position of the ship to Captain Blood. But Don Diego's easy explanation satisfied his captor.

New to the seas of the Spanish Main and to the ways of the adventurers who sailed it, Captain Blood still entertained illusions. But the next dawn was to shatter them rudely and for ever.

Coming on deck before the sun was up, he saw land ahead, as the Spaniard had promised them last night

Beating out a weather, against the gentle landward breeze he beheld a great ship on their starboard bow that he conceived to be some three or four miles off, and—as well as he could judge her at that distance—of a tonnage equal if not superior to their own Even as he watched her she altered her course, and going about came heading toward them, close hauled

"There," said a soft voice behind him in liquid Spanish, "is the Promised Land, Don Pedro"

He turned sharply to face Don Diego, so sharply that the sly smile was not effaced from the Spaniard's coutenance before Captain Blood's eyes had flashed upon it

"What land is that?" he demanded "Will you have the effrontery to tell me that is the coast of Curacao. That land, you treacherous, forsworn Spaniard"

"Ah, perro ingles You know too much," he said under his breath, and sprang for the Captain's throat.

Tight-locked in each other's arms they swayed a moment, then together they went down upon the deck, the Spaniard's feet perked from under him by the right leg of Captain Blood The Spaniard had depended upon choking the life out of Blood, and so gaining the half-hour that might be necessary to bring up that fine ship that was beating towards them. But all that Don Diego had accomplished was to betray himself completely

"Will I say a prayer for your dirty soul now, whilst I am in this position Captain Blood was furiously mocking him.

"Who will pray for your soul, I wonder; when that galleon comes to lie board and board with you? Do you know what ship it is? It is the Encar-
